On December 10th, tornadoes caused massive destruction throughout six states including Kentucky, Missouri, Arkansas, Illinois, Mississippi, and Tennessee claiming dozens of lives. The City of LaGrange is one of the many public power utilities who continue to work on the ground trying to restore power and help repair infrastructure.

The City of LaGrange sent a line crew made up of four city utility employees to assist in power restoration and a right of way crew made up of three electric employees to assist in tree removal and storm cleanup.

The four city employees that make up the line crew include Linwood Mitchell, Josh Bryant, Kyle Hyatt and Alan Potter. The three city employees that make up the right of way crew include Tommy Powell, Mike Dudley and Ricky Bowen.

“We will continue to support our neighbors who need our assistance in restoring service during this major storm,” LaGrange Utilities Director Patrick Bowie said. “Our electric and utility employees are a great representation of our community and we appreciate their willingness to help those in need of our service.”

The city crews returned from Kentucky Monday, December 20th.

The City of LaGrange remains committed to assist in helping surrounding communities following major storm events.
